SOLONS IN SESSION

Pennsylvania Legislators Began Work Monday Night by Electing

GARVIN CHIEF CLERK

A Victory for the Gang—Leib of Schuylkill Chosen Resident Clerk—Mr. Matt's Position.

The Pennsylvania Legislature re-assembled at Harrisburg Monday night to begin the actual work of the session.

The new rules which are supposed to do away with the gag and insure honest consideration of measures were adopted without opposition, and the list of standing committees furnished by the Committee on Committees, which gives proportionate committee representation to all political parties, was accepted.

The old gang representatives made their chief fight to retain Thomas H. Garvin, who has done effective "majority counting" in the past, as chief clerk and succeeded in carrying the point. William S. Leib, the Schuylkill County boss, was put up as resident clerk by the same combination. Both of these candidates had been rejected as unfit by the Committee on Committees, which named B. K. Boyd and W. P. Young for the places respectively. The Democrats caucused and named James I. Blakeslee for chief clerk and a candidate for resident clerk. The Penrose gang won.

In the appointment of committees, Hon. John T. Matt, in addition to being on the Committee on Committees was assigned to the following: Appropriations, Congressional Apportionment, Law and Order—to which any liquor measure will be referred—and Pensions and Gratuities.

Senator Endsley, representing this district, was appointed on the following committees: Agriculture (chairman), Banks and Building and Loan Associations, Forestry, Judicial Apportionment, Public Grounds and Buildings, Health and Sanitation, Roads and Highways, Legislative Apportionment.

This county did not get any of the minor positions in the House or Senate.

Bills Presented

On Tuesday the following bills of importance were presented:

In the Senate—

Seven food bills, prepared by Dairy and Food Commissioner Foust, introduced providing for better enforcement of the pure food laws, and providing fines and imprisonment for violations.

Third class city bill for modified commission form of government.

Mothers' pension bill.

To release $1,750,000 automobile license fund held up in State Treasury for use of roads.

Social club license bill, following suggestion of Governor.

The Senate adjourned until Monday night.

In the House—

Three pension bills for veterans of Civil War.

Bill for electrocution for first degree murderers.

Mrs. Harry Shaffer

Mrs. Harry Shaffer of Bedford Township died at her home Wednesday evening of pneumonia, aged about 33 years.

Mrs. Shaffer was a daughter of Joseph and Rebecca Hammond. She is survived by her husband, one daughter about nine years old, her mother, two sisters, Mary and Elizabeth at home, and two brothers, Clarence and Frank, of Altoona.

The funeral services will be held tomorrow (Saturday) forenoon at St. Paul's Church and will be conducted by her pastor, Rev. J. H. Zinn, D. D. Interment will be made in the cemetery adjoining the church.

Mrs. Shaffer was a woman of many fine qualities and will be missed by many friends.

Birthday Party

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Smith pleasantly entertained the following young people at their home on South Juliana Street, Monday evening, in honor of their daughter, Helen's, thirteenth birthday: Ruth Ritchey, Irene Cuppett, Margaret Peeper, Margaret Stiver, Bertha Wills, Magdalene Calhoun, Nellie Bain, Anna Guyer, Dorothy Allen, Ethel Heitze, George Enfield, Joe Shuck, Harry Brown, Conrad Hughes, Marshall England, Lawrence and Frank Guyer, Lester Mills, Russell McMullin and Luther and Bertram Smith.

Captain Thomas H. Lyons

Capt. T. H. Lyons

Taps sounded early last Sunday morning for another old soldier, when Captain Thomas H. Lyons was mustered out to join in the grand re-union on the Great Camp-ground.

Fifty-two years ago, when the call to arms was sent forth, Captain Lyons was a handsome and gallant young man. He was soon in the field, and before the war closed he had been the commanding officer of two companies of Bedford County boys. From October, 1861, to May, 1863, he was Captain of Company D, 55th Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry; and from February, 1864, to the close of the war he was Commander of Company I, Pennsylvania Volunteer Cavalry. In May, 1863, bad health compelled him to return home, but he did not remain home long. As soon as he was able for duty, he joined the cavalry service and served until the close of the war. He was for a time on the staff of General Rutherford B. Hayes, and later served under the great cavalry leader, Sheridan, and was with "Little Phil" at the Battle of Winchester.

At the Battle of Berryville (Virginia), Sunday morning, August 21, 1864, while drawn up in line of battle, the enemy trained a battery on Companies I and K. During the engagement, "Mack," the Captain's fine black steed was wounded, and the same ball that wounded "Mack," hit and wounded Scott Fletcher's prancing bay. Captain Lyons loved his spirited war horse, and after he was wounded the Captain sent him home where he was tenderly cared for until he died.

There were 160 officers and men in Company D. Thirty-six of these men were from Bedford. Only six of the Bedford boys are now living. They are: Humphrey Y. Arnold, David W. Prosser, James Metzger, W. W. Weisel, Jacob Burket and James Stoudenour.

Of the 120 men and officers in Company I, 24 are living, two of whom live in Bedford: W. Scott Fletcher and Barton Spidle.

The writer has been closely associated with Captain Lyons for the past two years. During that time he never heard him talk in an unkind way about anyone; he never heard him tell a vulgar or dubious story, or use language that could not be used in the presence of ladies. He was always courteous. He had a clean and intelligent mind. Captain Lyons was a gentleman—a well-bred son of well-born parents.

Captain Lyons was born December 7, 1832, in the old stone house where he was mustered out, January 19, 1913, aged 80 years. The Captain, his father, his mother, and his sister Margaret all passed away in the month of January in this old stone mansion.

Captain Lyons was the oldest son of Nicholas Lyons, who for forty years was Bedford's leading merchant. Nicholas Lyons was born in County of Carlow, Ireland, and came to Bedford in 1812. Bedford County never had a better citizen than Nicholas Lyons. In 1828 he married a beautiful Pittsburgh girl, Miss Mary Carson O'Hara, a granddaughter of General James O'Hara, of Revolutionary days.

Captain Lyons was educated in the Bedford schools and at Mount Saint Mary's College, Maryland. In 1879 he was married to Mary Elmira McGirr, who died five short months ago. Nicholas Lyons, their only living child, is now in the old home where his father was born, and where his grandfather lived one hundred years ago.

The funeral service was held Tuesday morning, January 21, at 9 o'clock, in St. Thomas' Catholic Church, Bedford. The Captain's pastor, Rev. Father Downes, delivered a good, peaceful sermon—a sermon that any old soldier could appreciate. The old Captain, and his old war horse that he loved so much are both at rest. Peace to their ashes.

Benjamin Huff

Benjamin Huff died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. R. A. Little, in Saxton on Wednesday of this week, aged 86 years, three months and 29 days.

Mr. Huff's parents both died when he was about four years old and he was raised by Solomon Fink near Marklesburg, Huntingdon County. He spent most of his life in Woodcock Valley. His wife died about four years ago and since that time he has been making his home with his children. He is survived by the following children: Hon. John W. Huff, Mrs. R. A. Little, Mrs. Martin Moore and Mrs. W. J. Houpp, of Saxton, and Mrs. John Reed and Mrs. Felix Speck, of Shy Beaver.

Mr. Huff was a member of the Reformed Church for many years and his body will rest by the side of that of his beloved wife, Rachel Huff, in the cemetery at the Russell Reformed Church, across the road from which they spent 48 years of their married life.

Mr. Huff was one of the oldest men in that section of the county and many regret his passing to the great beyond.

John N. Burket

John N. Burket, a well known resident of this place, died at his home, West Penn Street, Saturday night, January 18. He had been a sufferer for the past several years from kidney trouble, and was able to be about until four weeks ago, when he took his bed and rapidly declined.

The deceased was born at Cook's Mills, this county, December 17, 1839, being at the time of his death aged 73 years, one month and one day. He was a son of Nicholas and Annie Zeigler Burket, both deceased. On October 29, 1861, he was united in marriage to Annie Rebecca Dohson, who with the following children survives: Nicholas F. of Cumberland, Mrs. Margaret Prince of Washington, D. C., Joseph H. and Mrs. Daniel Burket, of Black Valley; Willard of Altoona, George S., Frank Wise and Charles R., of Bedford. He is also survived by three brothers and one sister, James Burket of Marysville, Kan.; Charles of Blue Rapids, Kan.; Lewis of Nebraska, and Mrs. Martha Lowery of Cook's Mills.

The deceased was a veteran of the Civil War, having enlisted in Company D, 138th Regt., August 26, 1862, and continued in service until the close of the conflict. For many years he was employed by the Pennsylvania Railroad Company as a section foreman, and was retired several years ago. He was a member of the Buffalo Mills Lodge of Odd Fellows and of Washington Camp, No. 81, P. O. S. of A., of this place, which organization attended the funeral in a body and conducted services at the grave.

The funeral service was held Wednesday afternoon at 1 o'clock in the Methodist Episcopal Church, conducted by the pastor, Rev. W. V. Ganoe, where a large concourse of friends and relatives had gathered to pay their last tribute of respect. Interment was made in the Bedford Cemetery.

"Dad" Burket, as he was familiarly known, was of a jovial disposition, true as steel to his friends, loyal to the lodges he was a member of, a kind and generous father and a good husband; always ready to contribute of his means and lend a helping hand to any who were in distress. He will not only be missed from his home, but from the lodge room, where he served for many years as a trustee and chaplain, and by his many friends in general. M. C.

OLD SOUTH PENN

Four Track Road From Newville to Pittsburgh.

The following article, which revives hope that a railroad will be built on the old South Penn survey, appeared in the city papers on Wednesday:

"Carlisle, Pa., January 21.—Business and real estate circles in Carlisle have received underground information that the Pennsylvania Railroad now holds tentative plans, with possibility of fulfillment in the direction of four-tracking the Cumberland Valley Railroad, an allied branch of the Pennsylvania, from Harrisburg to Chambersburg, and the establishment of a junction point at Newville, a few miles west of Carlisle, from which a four-track road can be run straight west to Pittsburgh along the lines of the old South Penn survey, lopping off nearly 70 miles from the circuitous main line west between Harrisburg and Pittsburgh.

"If the plans as understood here are carried out, northern and eastern Pennsylvania shipments to the South and far West will be delivered to the Cumberland Valley, which is a natural eastern gateway to the South, down to a gulf port, whence transshipments will be made by water to the Panama Canal to the western coast, and the transcontinental railway traffic will be diverted West from the Newville junction point."

Mrs. Mary A. Imler

Mrs. Mary A. Imler, wife of Josiah Imler, deceased, died at the home of her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Pensyl, near Cessna, Wednesday morning. Funeral services will be held at Messiah Church Sunday at 2:30. Obituary next week.

Thomas J. Roney

Thomas J. Roney died at his home in Pittsburgh on Wednesday, January 15, aged 45 years. About 22 years ago he was married to Margaret Huzzard of this place, who, with one daughter and two sons, survives. Interment was made in Pittsburgh Saturday morning, January 18.

MENTIONED IN BRIEF

Town Talk and Neighborhood Notes Tersely Told

MANY ITEMS OF INTEREST

Gleaned From Various Sources—Little Points Picked Up By Vigilant Reporters.

John W. Gailey is ill at his home on East Pitt Street.

Mrs. Fred C. Pate, who has been quite ill, is reported better.

Mrs. Albert Fyan entertained a number of friends at her home on Pitt Street Wednesday evening.

J. S. Nawgel has killed four hogs this fall which weighed 349, 416, 454 and 542 pounds respectively.

Mrs. Harry Davis of Cumberland Valley underwent a successful operation at the Allegheny Hospital, Cumberland, a few days ago and is getting along nicely.

The offices on the John P. Reed property, Juliana Street, are being remodeled. An entirely new front has been added to the building, containing large windows. It is a decided improvement.

Marriage licenses were issued in Cumberland this week to Howard Andrew Blair of Six Mile Run and Mildred Anderson of Robertsdale and Walter Scott Crawford and Minnie B. Clingerman, of Inglesmith.

Alvin Irvine, little son of Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Irvine, met with the misfortune on Wednesday of having a wheel of a water tank run over his shoulder. He fell from the tank under the wheel. The tank was empty.

Richard W. Leo returned Monday evening from St. Joseph's Hospital, Philadelphia, accompanied by his daughter, Mrs. Ella Gilchrist, who was with him during his stay at the hospital. Mr. Leo is getting along nicely.

On Tuesday County Treasurer and Mrs. John Fletcher took their little daughter Helen to Cumberland where she was operated upon by Dr. E. L. Jones for adenoids. She was brought home by her parents and is getting along nicely.

Dr. A. Enfield entertained some of his political friends at the Hotel Waverly at dinner last Sunday. The Blair County guests were Jacob Adams, Albert Shultz, David B. North and Simon Snyder. Three guests from this county were present.

We acknowledge with thanks a pass over the whole system of the John Leister Worsing Railway system. This system occupies a whole room in Huntingdon and John is the Owner and General Manager. John is the eight-year-old son of R. L. Worsing, formerly of Point, who is a trusted employee of the H. & B. T. R. R.

The Ladies' Aid Society of St. John's Reformed Church will have a chicken and hot biscuit supper in D. O. Smith's Ice Cream Parlors, West Pitt Street, on next Thursday evening, January 30, beginning at 5 o'clock. That means that you seldom get as much to eat for twenty-five cents as will be offered to you then and there.

Over 100 members gathered at the local Moose Home Wednesday night to witness the initiation of a large class into the mysteries of the Loyal Order of Moose. Mr. Scanlon of Johnstown obligated the candidates and gave the secret work, after which an elaborate banquet, prepared by the house committee, was enjoyed by 135. The order is in a flourishing condition and from the interest manifested by the members, the indications are that the membership will reach 600. The next class will be initiated on February 5.

In an article on "The End of an Era" in the Bulletin of the American Iron and Steel Age of December 31 the editor, James M. Swank, in reviewing his work concludes the article with the following paragraph concerning Miss Columbia A. Horne of Johnstown, formerly of this county: "We are also under obligations to Miss Columbia A. Horne of Johnstown, who has been our bookkeeper and chief clerk for the last twenty-one years. In this long period Miss Horne has been of invaluable service to the Association and to us personally. Her intelligence, industry, tact, and loyalty to the Association are beyond all praise."

Weyant-Thompson

Arthur G. Weyant of Altoona and Miss Christina C. Thompson of Saxton were married in Cumberland on Wednesday of last week by Rev. G. E. Brown.

Hon. William Donahoe

After two years of intense suffering Hon. William Donahoe, aged about 65, died at his home in Cumberland at noon on Sunday. Two years ago he underwent an operation for goitre, from which he never recovered.

He was a native of Bean's Cove, this county, where he was a prominent farmer and politician.

In 1880 he was elected to the Legislature and served one term, refusing a renomination. He became a dealer in real estate and a contractor, and prospered. He was also known as an expert judge of timber and bark.

Mr. Donahoe possessed a good nature which did not desert him in his adversities and suffering. Pain-racked in frame, he was patient at all times.

Mr. Donahoe came from an old family, his father, the late Patrick Donahoe, having been among the first settlers of Bean's Cove. He is survived by his wife, who was Miss Anna Whipp, also a member of an old Bean's Cove family, one son, Grover Donahoe, at home, and three daughters, Mrs. Mae Getzendanner of Clinton, Ia.; Mrs. Edna McRae of Sharon and Miss Helena Donahoe at home.

The funeral took place Wednesday morning at 9 o'clock at St. Patrick's Catholic Church. The interment was made in SS. Peter and Paul's Cemetery.

Harry C. Kirk

Harry C. Kirk of Fishertown died at the home of his son, Dr. Clair B. Kirk, at Everett on Saturday, January 18, 1913, of Bright's disease, aged 52 years, eight months and five days.

Mr. Kirk was born at Fishertown on May 13, 1860, a son of William and Sarah (Blackburn) Kirk. On July 22, 1882, he was united in marriage with Miss Flora Snoberger. He is survived by his widow, his mother and two children, Dr. Clair B. Kirk of Everett and Miss Mary at Juniata College, Huntingdon. He is also survived by two sisters, Mrs. Annie Allen of Fishertown and Margaret Mock of Ryot.

The funeral services were held in the Friends Church, Fishertown, on Monday, conducted by Rev. M. J. Weaver. Interment was made at Fishertown.

Mr. Kirk was a carpenter by trade and as a mechanic had few equals in this section. As a man he was quiet and unassuming and in all things honorable. His citizenship was a credit to the community in which he lived and he was honored and respected by all who knew him.

Hon. S. P. Wishart

Hon. S. P. Wishart of Well's Valley, Fulton County, died at the Union Hotel, Everett, Monday evening of last week, aged 78 years, nine months and one day. For a number of years he spent the summers on his farm in Fulton County and the winters in Everett. His wife, one son and one daughter survive.

He was a Civil War veteran, serving for a short time as Second Lieutenant in Company M, 26th Pa. Cavalry. He was a member of the Pennsylvania Legislature in 1872, representing Bedford, Somerset and Fulton Counties. He was a staunch church worker and was highly respected by all who knew him.

The funeral services were conducted in the Everett Presbyterian Church Thursday morning, January 16, by Rev. E. A. Sprock of Mann's Choice. Interment was made in the Everett Cemetery.

John W. Gephart

John Wilson Gephart died at his home in New Paris during the morning of January 18, aged 54 years, four months and 15 days.

Mr. Gephart was an industrious young man. He was a graduate of one of the state normal schools of Pennsylvania, and was principal of the New Paris schools during the term commencing in 1897. He was married but a few months ago to Mrs. Cora Mickel, and is survived by his wife and these brothers and sister—Isaiah and Albert, of New Enterprise; James and William, of Cessna, and Mrs. Gabriel Miller of Alum Bank; also by an uncle, Daniel Gephart, of Altoona.

The funeral services, which occurred Monday morning in the M. E. Church which he attended, were conducted by Rev. M. C. Flegal, assisted by Rev. W. F. Conley. The members of I. O. O. F., No. 868, of Pleasantville, of which the deceased was a member, delivered their burial rite in a very impressive manner. Interment was made in the Evangelical Cemetery at New Paris.

ANNUAL REPORT

Of State Board of Education Requests

MORE MONEY FOR SCHOOLS

Advisability of Changes in the School Code Discussed—Equalizing Educational Advantages.

The first annual report of the State Board of Education has been filed with the Governor by the Executive Secretary, J. George Becht. After enumerating the various lines of activity in which the Board's work lies, attention is directed, first, to the question of equalizing educational advantages throughout the state. The report says that the equalization of educational opportunity throughout the Commonwealth is a question calling for careful consideration. Increasingly the fact is being accepted by the general public that the education of the people is not a local matter, because its consequences are of state and national moment. An educated citizen is not of worth alone to the community in which he lives but his influence is state and nation wide. Equally the baneful effects of illiteracy and incompetency arising from lack of school training are not confined to the limits of the locality where opportunities are wanting, but show their significance over widely marked areas. The state has both a duty and a privilege. Its duty is to protect itself against illiteracy and incompetency, and its privilege is to offer aid that will help those who are in the process of training for efficient citizenship to realize the best that is in them. There are many districts in Pennsylvania where, owing to the topography of the country and to the remoteness of the inhabitants from each other, it is difficult to maintain proper schools with the amount of local taxation and of ordinary state appropriation. To make proper provision for these exceptional conditions a Special Aid Fund should be provided by the Legislature. Such a fund could be administered on the basis of actual needs as revealed by an investigation into the valuation, assessments, necessary expenditures and general financial conditions of such districts.

More Money for Common Schools

To make the Pennsylvania School System fully effective it is absolutely essential that there should be a material addition to the general fund now appropriated for elementary and secondary education. In many places the rate of taxation is as high as the people can bear and the schools in these places are far from being as efficient as they ought to be. This is especially true of many rural communities which are being deserted by the farm owners, who move to the cities for better educational advantages for their children. This puts a heavy burden upon the tenant, who must practically furnish the support for the schools out of a limited and divided income from his labor. The readjustment of the apportionment of the state appropriation as provided by the Code will relieve the pressure at some points, but from a state-wide view there is great need for an increase in the general appropriation.

By the new method of appropriating the common school fund many of the districts have reported losses. These losses have generally come in the centers of wealth and population, as was expected. The more remote districts have been benefited, still the whole amount appropriated to the common schools is not proportionate to the wealth of the state. By an increase of the general appropriation, the total amount of the losses sustained by the cities and towns would be restored and at the same time the proportionate distribution to other sections of the state would aid greatly in making the schools more efficient. This Commonwealth can well afford to lift its biennial appropriation from $15,000,000 to $20,000,000 and thereby greatly add to the efficiency of our schools.

Are Changes in the Code Advisable?

The report says: "A careful survey of the whole field in which the Code operates shows criticism or suggestion of change on comparatively few points. It is more than probable that at these points conditions will so shape themselves that the law as it now stands will ultimately be satisfactory. It should be kept in mind that during the first year of the existence of the Code its administration was in the hands of newly elected boards, two-thirds of whose membership was made up of men who had had no previous experience in administering school affairs. In view of these considerations, it would seem fairly reasonable to assume that the path of wisdom lies in allowing a little longer period to elapse before the process of amendment should begin. To amend without reasonable certainty as to the effect of amendment and to be doubtful as to the remedial effect of proposed changes, would be to invite confusion. If all those who have a part in carrying out the provisions of the Code will bear in mind the central theme around which every section of it crystallizes, namely: the welfare of the children; and will interpret its provisions in terms of childhood's highest welfare, the minor objections now apparent will disappear and the results under the system will justify the highest expectations of the citizenship of the Commonwealth."

Mrs. Mary Jane Floyd Culler

At her late residence in Philadelphia Friday morning, January 3, 1913, passed away Mrs. Mary Jane Floyd Culler, wife of Rev. Martin L. Culler, D. D. She is survived by her bereaved husband and three sorrowing children and an only brother—Mrs. Pauline Lydia Wood, wife of Colonel W. S. Wood, U. S. A.; Miss Anna Nellie Culler, Capt. Robert Martin Culler, of the Medical Corps, U. S. A., and her only brother, Rev. David B. Floyd, D. D.

Mrs. Culler, favorably known to many citizens of Bedford by her residence here as a pastor's wife, was a native of Middletown, Md., and a daughter of the late Hezekiah and Lydia (Bittle) Floyd. Descended from a long line of Lutheran ancestry and given early to God in Christian baptism, she soon confessed her faith in Christ and gave her name and service to the church. She was envied by some of the best known ministers and educators in the church. Rev. David F. Bittle, D. D., first president of Roanoke College, Va., and Rev. Daniel H. Bittle, D. D., formerly president of North Carolina College, N. C., were her uncles, and Rev. Ezra Keller, D. D., first president of Wittenberg College, O., was her cousin, and Rev. Prof. Charles P. Krauth, D. D., LL. D., late professor in the University of Pennsylvania was her relative. And by her marriage to Rev. Martin L. Culler, D. D., she was called to move in a conspicuous sphere of life wherein she showed peculiar tact, prudence, patience and all the domestic virtues. For nearly half a century she was the joy of her husband's home and heart, helpful to him by her wise counsel and cheerful love in all the varied experiences of a pastor's wife.

Mrs. Culler was a woman of unusual consistency, deep piety and zealous devotion. In church life she found a cherished sphere for the development of her varied talents, and became a vitalized force wherever her lot was cast. She was ardent and intense by nature and her nervous energy made her a great leader in every forward movement in the line of literary, social and religious activity. Many people are yet living, who will note with sadness the passing away of this gifted woman, and who will unite in praise of her pure and consistent Christian life—never mentioning her name except with admiration for her high endowments and noble purposes. It was a great privilege to enjoy her friendship.

The funeral services were held at her home in Philadelphia, conducted by Rev. M. H. Valentine, D. D., editor of the Lutheran Observer. Her remains were conveyed to Mercersburg and there laid to rest in the beautiful God's acre, beside the grave of her little daughter, Vida Luther, to await the resurrection of the just.

Piece of Bone in His Heart

A particle of bone from a kneecap fractured while playing baseball worked its way through his system to the heart of fifteen-year-old George Hayes of Philadelphia and caused his death.

SURELY BANISHES CATARRH

Where there's catarrh there's thousands of catarrh germs. You can't get rid of catarrh unless you kill these germs.

You can't kill them with stomach medicine or sprays because they can't get where germs are.

You can kill these germs with Booth's HYOMEI, a penetrating, antiseptic, balsamic air that you breathe a few times a day directly over the raw, sore, germ infested membrane. It does not contain morphine or any habit forming drug.

For catarrh, croup, coughs, and colds, HYOMEI is sold on money back plan by F. W. Jordan, Jr. Complete outfit, $1.00. Extra bottles of Booth's HYOMEI if afterwards needed, only 50 cents. Just breathe it—no stomach dosing.

Feeding of Wild Birds

Winter, with all that it means, has come, parts of our state are already covered with snow, and all parts will, in all probability, soon be in the same condition. Bob White has run the gauntlet between long lines of enemies, and is now called upon to face the worst of all—starvation. He may be in good shape today, but soon the snows will have shortened his food supply, reducing his vitality, so that when the cold rains begin he will not be disposed to venture out for the first twenty-four hours, even though his stomach be nearly empty, but will sit huddled with his friends in some point of shelter until the first day is past, and then on the second day, driven by hunger, he faces the storm, securing no more food perhaps than before the rain began; and then with every feather dripping, chilled to the bone, with an empty stomach, and still more greatly reduced vitality, he huddles with his little family, for the last time, to die, to freeze or to be smothered by the drifting snows. His entire pathway along life's journey is marked only by good deeds to men. Won't you, who may read this, try to help him in this hour of distress and need? You are perhaps wasting every hour more than enough to keep Bob and his entire family in food the year around. I beg of you to hunt him up and scatter feed where he can get it. One bushel of grain placed where he can find it means more to him now than does all the kind words that may be uttered in a century. Put yourself on Bob's place and think of what winter means to him.

What applies to the quail, may also be said of the wild turkey, and all our winter birds. I beg of you, no matter what your position in life may be, to help feed the birds. If you can not do the work yourself, get some one to do it for you. Write to the Game Commission, Harrisburg, Pa., for bulletin No. 2.

Respectfully yours,

Joseph Kalbfus,

Secretary, Game Commission.

The February Outing

The Conquest of Mt. McKinley, highest of American peaks, begins in this issue. The story is told by Belmore Browne, the explorer and artist, who has accompanied Prof. Parker on all his expeditions.

Kephart's Southern Highlander is continued with a chapter on the personal life of the People of the Hills, and Kirk Alexander continues his angling adventures on the North Shore of Lake Superior.

An interesting addition this month is the tale of the voyage of the brig "President" from New York to Tenerife in the '20s. It is taken from the personal journals of Captain "Nat" Webber, an old clipper ship commander.

Besides there are a couple of rattling good outdoor stories and a number of more technical articles Outing Magazine. All newsstands, 25c Subscription, $3.

Training Canaries in Death Chamber

Training canary birds to sing in the electric death chamber of the Ohio penitentiary at Columbus, is the unique life work of John Atkinson, a murderer serving a life sentence who, being a "trustee," has the privilege of spending some of his time there. In the room in which more than four score condemned men have paid the penalty for their crimes, he breeds the little yellow singers. When the birds are at the proper age, he first teaches them to fly—first from one arm of the electric chair to another, and then from the death chair to the old gallows above, in another part of the room. A picture in the February Popular Mechanics Magazine shows the convict working with the birds.

HECKERMAN LETTER

P-Nut Salesman Encounters Flood on Southwestern Trip.

Parkersburg, W. Va., Jan. 20.

River history is interesting and doubly so when one sees the waters as they roll by, carrying everything before them. Ruin history has been largely connected with the history of our country.

This city of Parkersburg has always been a very important point on the Ohio River, which is very interesting, especially at this time when the water is so high that many families are driven from homes, whilst many more are imprisoned in the upper stories of their homes without fire and only with what food the city sends them by boats. Parkersburg has always been a principal point along the river even from the time Blennerhassett Island was first occupied by General Blennerhassett and after Aaron Burr made his debut on the scene and got Blennerhassett into trouble with his fantasy of establishing an empire in the Southwest. Of later years this city has grown rapidly because of its commercial interests and the building of boats.

The Ohio was first discovered in the 1600's and the first it was reached by the explorers was at Pittsburgh, Pa., then named Fort Pitt. The first steamboat to arrive in Parkersburg was one called New Orleans in 1811. I can find no record of the time when the first boat was built here, but the records show that in the year 1801 the first sea-going vessel ever built on the Ohio was launched at Pittsburgh. It was called the Amity, of one hundred and twenty tons, it sailed with a cargo of horse shoes and nails for the West Indies and was wrecked in a storm in 1847. The following year a number of schooners were built and launched at Pittsburgh and sailed for eastern ports. We are told that a number of vessels were also built that year at Wheeling.

There are seven large rivers in West Virginia. The highest mark recorded at Parkersburg was in February 1884 when a stage of 52 feet nine inches was reached.

With the river stationary this morning at a 44 foot point, conditions are about the same today as yesterday. The only trains are those going east over the B. & O. The Ohio River roads have run no trains for a week and there are no prospects of any for some days yet. The superintendent of the road told me last evening that there was no certainty as to when they would get the line running between this and Kenova, that he did not think the road-bed was damaged much as there had been but little wind and it was the wind that made the waves which washes the ballast from the ties and causes the underpinning of the trestles which they could not determine about until the water had receded.

Thirty families made application this morning for relief, while seventy people are being housed on the third floor of the city building and the county is furnishing provisions for them. A cook stove has been supplied and the people all cook for themselves on it. Let me tell you it is a motley throng.

It is a good thing that the cost of living is not so high here as in Bedford. Fine looking apples are ten cents per peck and the same for potatoes. In Bedford apples are twice that price and so are potatoes. Good butter here is worth 35 cents per pound, whilst eggs are 25 cents per dozen.

Men and stout boys last Saturday and Sunday were paid as much as 75 cents per hour for work in moving goods from stores and furniture from homes to places of safety. Hundreds of skiffs have been out all the time since last Saturday, and the owners living along the river banks made good money carrying persons to and from the end of Juliana Street to the bridge and also in taking parties around through the principal part of the flooded district to see the sights.

L. H. Holbert of Elizabeth, in Wirt County, W. Va., arrived here this morning in a little gasoline boat for the mail for Elizabeth. They have not had any since last Wednesday. The river has been too high for any of the boats of size to run and traffic has been suspended on the Kanawha Railroad since the above date. Mr. Holbert after loading his boat with mail started back to Elizabeth at noon. The telephones are all in trouble and this fact has kept Dad from spending several quarters.

I hear that the water was up to the second story of the home of my old friend, James Gilchrist, at Marietta, O. I have seen plenty of the flood and only fear that it will follow me all the way down the river to Cincinnati and then still on down to the Mississippi in Tennessee and Arkansas.

Today is like April at home. The river is falling but so slowly that one must have a critic's eye to see it. They talk about its falling two-thirds of an inch in an hour, etc. Each and everyone dreads the flood. All fear sickness after the water leaves the streets and say that a flood like this always leaves a dreg in shape of malaria for months after the river recedes and is within its banks.

A very interesting service was held in the First Presbyterian Church of Parkersburg last Sunday evening. It was in the nature of a reception tendered to the 78 men members who have recently been received into the church.

Please send me the paper and oblige, Yours truly, M. P. Heckerman.

Statements That May Be Investigated—Testimony of Bedford Citizens.

When a Bedford citizen comes to the front, telling his friends and neighbors of his experience, you can rely on his sincerity. The statements of people residing in far away places do not command your confidence. Home endorsement is the kind that backs Doan's Kidney Pills. Such testimony is convincing. Investigation proves it true. Below is a statement of a Bedford resident. No stronger proof of merit can be had.

Mrs. D. O. Smith, 234 W. Pitt St., Bedford, Pa., says: "I willingly confirm all I said in praise of Doan's Kidney Pills, when I publicly recommended them some years ago. They brought prompt and permanent relief to one of my family who suffered from kidney trouble. I consider Doan's Kidney Pills worthy of the strongest endorsement."

What—Where—When—Why

Now to practical matters. You need not worry about your trousseau. I have pretended for so long that you are my own daughter that I am having the time of my life getting together the things you will need. Of course your mother will want to do some of it, and you, yourself, will want a hand in making the dainty things that will go with you into your new life as the belongings of your girlhood. I don't mean to be selfish about it or to grasp at all the pleasure of shopping and planning and providing. I only meant that—as money is none too plentiful at home and the others must have their share and their chance in life—I am giving myself the great pleasure of helping your mother to provide you with what is proper for your new position in life.—The Ladies' World for February.

Disinherited

By HELOISE BRAYTON

When Tom Pickering was first married it didn't seem to him that he would ever care to spend an evening anywhere except with his dear wife, in their cozy little home, and for the first fortnight he went nowhere in the evening, unless he took her with him.

During the second month some of his premarital cronies were having a little poker party and telephoned him to join them. He did so.

That was Pickering's first relapse, but not his last. Indeed, he had a great many of them—so many that he found it difficult to find excuses for them. Mrs. Pickering was a dear little woman and a very sensible one. She argued that if she found fault with her husband for leaving her alone nights while he enjoyed the pleasures of bachelorhood there would arise a series of alterations which would render his home unpleasant to him and he would stay away altogether.

Nor was this the worst of it. A man hobnobbing with men must spend money. He can't avoid it. It's a game of billiards, a cigar, an evening at the theater. This all makes a considerable total. The consequence was that when his wife felt like enjoying an evening where she might listen to music, of which she was very fond, the husband's expenditures had so reduced the exchequer that there were no funds for the purpose.

This wasn't right. Pickering knew it wasn't right, but found himself unable to break away from his associations. He said the only way to do that was to leave the place where they lived and go to some other. But when his wife asked him how he was going to get a position in some other place he had no answer. He looked sober, and that ended the conversation.

So Mrs. Pickering fell into the habit of enduring without complaint.

One night when Pickering had gone out there came a ring at the telephone. Mrs. Pickering answered the call and learned that her husband's aunt was very ill and Tom was to come around immediately. The aunt, a maiden lady of sixty and in chronic bad health, was very fond of her nephew, and it was expected that he would make him her heir. Mrs. Pickering held a lengthy conversation with her informant, the old lady's housekeeper, with a view to taking steps to find the missing man. But it led to nothing, and Mrs. Pickering concluded to go to the sick woman herself.

She found the invalid suffering great pain. A physician was present, and the house was in a hubbub. The old lady was sure she was going to die and had sent for her lawyer to add a codicil to her will covering some small bequests she wished to make. Seeing her niece, she called her to her bed and told her to go to the telephone and not cease her calls till she had located Tom. He was the only relative she had in the world and she must have him with her when dying.

Since Tom Pickering was attending a show frequented only by men—no one knew where—his wife was unable to reach him. She gave it up and announced the fact to his aunt.

The old lady meanwhile had got a temporary relief and was in fine condition to be angry with the man she wanted and couldn't get. She began a fire of questions at his wife as to his habits which the poor woman tried in vain to parry. The old lady was very sharp and drew out the fact, in spite of Mrs. Pickering's efforts to conceal it, that Tom was away most of the time nights, spending it with his men cronies.

"And what do you do?" asked the sick woman.

"Oh, I am a great home body. I don't mind staying alone."

"H'm!" The old lady thought a few moments, then asked that the attorney be sent to her. When he came she directed him to draw a will for her to sign leaving all her property to Mary Ellen Pickering. The young wife was present and heard the order. She was much relieved, thinking that the old lady was about to disinherit her husband and leave her property elsewhere; Ellen made no comment, sitting silent until the will was drawn, signed and witnessed. Then she put her arm about the testator and assured her that she would live to make a dozen wills.

At midnight Mrs. Pickering went home, intending to return early in the morning. Tom came in about 2 o'clock and was about to go to his aunt when a telephone message came stating that the invalid had passed away. Mrs. Pickering gave her husband an account of what had passed excepting that he had been disinherited in her favor.

The day after the funeral the will was opened in presence of those interested and Tom Pickering, who was not named in the instrument. When he heard his wife's name read out as inheriting what he had expected he was astonished. Then, recovering his equanimity, he said:

"Well, it's all in the family. You can transfer it to me, you know."

But Mrs. Pickering had endured quite enough from having the family income controlled by her husband, and the transfer was never made. Indeed she controlled the income of her inheritance herself. However, Tom had received a lesson and turned over a new leaf. He is now a middle aged man and does not care to spend money for trifles. But he would prefer that his aunt's estate should be in his possession.

USE OF WHO OR WHOM.

Where Grammar Bunks Up Against Idiom and Gets a Jolt.

The employment of the nominative "who" for the accusative in certain forms of interrogation has become so imbedded in common usage that resort, even now, to the strictly orthodox practice frequently requires, on the part of educated men, positive effort or prolonged training. It somehow does not seem natural. In the past assuredly this nominative form, where precise grammar would require the accusative, turns up with almost invariable regularity in works which set out to represent colloquial speech.

"Who is it from?" says the mother in Jane Austen's "Pride and Prejudice," to her daughter, who has just received a letter. "Who is it like?" says the heroine of "Jane Eyre" to St. John Rivers as she shows him the picture of Rosamund Oliver. Such examples could be multiplied by hundreds. There are cases, indeed, when the use of "whom" would strike upon the ears of most of us as painfully pedantic.

"Who the devil is he talking to?" says Sir Lucius O'Trigger in Sheridan's "Rivals," as he notices Captain Absolute soliloquizing. To tolerate "whom" in place of "who" in such a sentence as the last would require the speaker to be so thoroughly steeped in grammar that the sense of traditional usage, which has been hardening into idiom, has at last been completely overcome. That height of linguistic virtue few of us there are who attain.—Thomas R. Lounsbury in Harper's Magazine.

FURY OF A SPIDER.

An Insect Tragedy as Seen Through a Magnifying Glass.

One day, rumaging in an old desk, I found a magnifying glass. It was September, and in a sunny, weed ridden corner of the garden I had discovered a big black and gold spider who had strung her web between two tall burdocks and was doing a thriving business in grasshoppers.

Seated on the ground, I now surveyed her through the glass for an hour as she hung in the middle of her engine of destruction. When I touched the net with my finger she swung frantically to and fro, prompted doubtless by some instinct of self preservation, but otherwise was as motionless as if carved in jet.

Grasshoppers were not very plentiful as yet, but at last a large green fellow flew plump into the toils, the spines on his legs that had so often disengaged sweet music becoming entangled. Instantly the crafty spider was all alive. Darting upon her victim, she took her station above him, and, hanging by two legs, seized him in her other six and rolled him round and round, unswathing him in a band of silver silk until he was as helpless as a mummy, and then she bit him in a dozen places with fangs oozing with poison.

At the spectacle of her evil eyes glittering with the lust of killing, magnified as they were by the glass, I turned sick and rolled over on my face among the weeds and lay for a long time miserably inert.—Atlantic Monthly

Strange Freak of Memory.

There is a strange story of how Sir Walter Scott, producing "The Bride of Lammermoor" during illness, was afterward found to have forgotten entirely what he had thus created. According to James Ballantyne, "the book was written and published before Mr. Scott was able to rise from his bed, and he assured me when it was first put into his hands in a complete shape that he did not recollect a single incident, character or conversation it contained. The original incidents of the story, which he had known from boyhood, he still remembered, but he knew no more about the story he had written than he did before he began to write or even think about writing it." These facts were corroborated by Mr. Lockhart, Sir Walter Scott's son-in-law and biographer, so that they are placed beyond question.

He died about twenty years afterward, very ingeniously leaving half his property to his wife and family in England and half his property to his wife and family in Japan. It was raining very heavily in Berlin, so a wealthy merchant, on leaving the exchange, hailed a cab and asked to be driven to a distant part of the city. Instantly the cabman whipped up his horse and soon disappeared around the next corner.—Weekly Telegraph.

JULIET'S BALCONY.

It Looks Just as It Did When Romeo Wooded the Sweet Veronese.

This was the home of the Capulets, from whom descended Juliet, from whom so many kind hearts have wept and of whom the poets have sung.

You read the words on a tablet by the side of a tall and slender gray house in a quiet street of Verona. A few steps farther on the busy life of the old city is centered in the market place and in the one or two streets that lead from it. You stand in front of the lightly built dwelling, and you look at the slim balcony of wood from which bent forward the form of the radiant girl whose undying love story has echoed down the ages. It is an autumn day, and within the rail of the narrow framework some one has placed red flowers in tall green pots. A curtain at the little window moves in the breeze, and you expect at any moment to see the dainty form of Juliet appear and to hear a rippling laugh fall from her lips.

A woman steps from the room beyond, through the open window and stands to listen. She has a child in her arms, and he claps his hands, laughing and crowing, no doubt just as the beloved Veronese did centuries ago. The mother hushes him, for she is intently listening to the market cries in the midst of that everyday life walks the immortal Juliet.—London Telegraph

POWER OF THE SUN.

If Man Could Only Utilize It in a Perfect Heat Engine.

The heat of the sun that would be received on one square acre of the earth's surface at right angles to the rays of the sun, if the sky was clear and all other conditions favorable, would, if man could utilize all in a perfect heat engine, exert the power of 12,000 horses. But this figure is not of mathematical accuracy owing to the discrepancy of results among different researchers in many parts of the world, on plains at sea level, higher, and on tops of the highest mountains to which scientific instruments could be carried.

And this great force has been at work during millions of years in forming the world for the abode of coming man. Winds, tides, rains, chemical activity, coal, wood, oil—these and more are all due to this vast power of the sun.

A "horsepower" (how much longer will this word be used, when kilowatt is so much better?) is a force that can lift a weight of 33,000 pounds through a height of one foot in one minute. Thus the solar power reaching the deck of a slow going steamer, if all made available by the genius of man, could run the engines at a reasonable and comparatively safe rate.—Edgar Lucien Larkin in New York American Satellites of Saturn.

Photometric studies of six of the principal satellites of Saturn, made by Guthnick of the royal observatory of Berlin, indicate a confirmation of the previous conclusions of other observers that several, and perhaps all, of these satellites behave like our own moon in keeping always the same side toward the planet around which they revolve. In regard to the satellite named Tethys, an interesting hypothesis is offered to account for its very marked changes of luminosity. The theory is that Tethys possesses the form of a long ellipsoid, the two principal axes of which are to one another in the ratio of five to two. A similar suggestion has been made concerning the shape of the asteroid Eros, which likewise exhibits great variations of light, according to its position in its orbit around the sun.—Harper's

Keep the Armholes Down.

It is strange that not one person in a thousand knows how to help a man on with his coat or a lady with her jacket. They all make the mistake of holding the garment too high, especially the last sleeve. They lift it so that a man nearly dislocates his arm reaching for it. The more futilely he grabs and claws and lurches for it the higher they hold it until the wretched victim would have to get on a pair of stilts to find the armhole. The proper way? Why, hold the coat so that the armholes are as low down as the man's waist, taking care to keep the skirt of the garment off the floor, of course. If there is any struggle to find the last armhole, drop it still lower. Never raise it. Drop it until his hand slips into it naturally.

In the true life of the individual every day is the beginning of the new year. Jordan

WHEN A MAN'S SICK.

That's the Time a Woman Does the Boss Act to Perfection.

When a woman has charge of a sick man she feels as important as the marshal of the day at a country Fourth of July celebration, and however amiable she may be at other times she is very "bossy" when she has medicine to give a man or lotions to put on him. If he wants a drink of water she expresses the opinion that he is drinking too much and remembers that her Aunt Harriet's husband once drank a great deal when he was sick and had convulsions.

If the sick man becomes impatient and says the medicine is doing no good she reminds him curtly that "time" is necessary. She has even been known to dip into the classics and say that Rome was not built in a day. The air of wisdom with which she examines the doctor books convinces the sick man that, however intelligent his medical adviser may have been, after his recovery he will be informed that he would have been sick much longer had she not used her homemade lotions. Whatever she does at night the doctor will agree in the morning that it was very good.

The sleepiest woman in the world will stay up all night cheerfully if she can get a chance to doctor somebody, and if a man has medicine to take at an unusual hour he will get it if there is a woman around. —Ed Howe in American Magazine.

USE OF "TURKISH" WORDS.

Ottomans Themselves Don't Know the Meaning of Them.

"Sublime porte" is one of those European expressions for Turkish institutions which are never used by the Turks themselves. The Ottoman government's official title for itself is Hukumet-i seniyeh, the glorious government.

Turks do not speak of "the sultan," but of the "padishah," a Persian term meaning the father of monarchs.

Turkey is a geographical expression used outside the land it denotes, but unknown to those who dwell in it. The Turks talk of Roumelia Anadol. The foreign residents may speak of Anatolia, Albania or the Lebanon. They will tell you they live at Smyrna, Saloniki or Beirut or elsewhere but the word Turkey never crosses their lips. In the realm itself there is no collective name for the territory of the sultan.

Albania, Bulgaria and Roumania, although contiguous to one another, speak three totally different languages. The Bulgarian tongue is that of an ancient Russia, and Roumanian resembles that of ancient Rome more closely than modern Italian does. Albanian has no marked affinity with any other language, though philologists have discovered in it some slight traces of Basque and Hungarian influence. —New York Sun.

A "Touching" Story.

The young lady who had sat for a crayon portrait was not altogether pleased with the result. "It looks like me, of course," she said, inspecting it doubtfully, "and yet I think there are some things about it that ought to be changed."

She suggested that the eyes should have rather more of an upward look, that the right hand should be a little less prominent, that the hair should be made more wavy and that certain changes ought to be made in the drapery.

"That would require a great deal of retouching," said the artist, "and I should have to charge you about $10 additional."

"Oh, dear!" she exclaimed, with a pout. "I shall have to give it up. Papa won't stand my 'retouching' him to that extent."

The Eagle.

According to Washington Irving, the Delaware Indian had a superstitious reverence for the eagle, believing that a guardian spirit in the form of this bird watched over them, hovering in the sky far out of sight. When pleased with their actions, he sent abundant crops and made them have great success in hunting, but when displeased he would vent his rage in the thunder, which was his voice, and the lightning, which was the flashing of his eye, and strike dead the object of his displeasure. They also believed that the feathers of this bird would render the wearer invisible and invulnerable.

One Way of Putting It.

"My dear boy," said Ennepek, who happened to be in a confidential mood "you will never know what real happiness is until you get married."

"You don't mean it!" exclaimed Singleton, astonished at such a remark from such an unexpected source.

"It's a fact," rejoined Ennepek; "but then it will be too late for you to appreciate it."—London Answers.

Rapidly Aged.

Client (to matrimonial agent)—You showed me this lady's photo last year and told me she was twenty-five, but after making inquiries I find she is over thirty. Matrimonial Agent—Well you see, her father died lately and that aged her very much.

Great Provocation.

"You say, madam, that you were under great excitement when you struck this woman."

"Yes. She had just found the family Bible with my age in it."

The Easiest Task.

Probably the easiest task is for a poor man to tell what a rich man should do with his money.—Aitchison Globe.

Harrisburg's Best Newspaper

The Harrisburg Patriot is the only newspaper in Central Pennsylvania that is not controlled in politics by party alliances or political advertising. It is a clean, bright independent and newsy paper, carrying the Associated Press reports and special features which are unmatched by any paper in the territory which it reaches. It is issued every week day in the year and is the paper for the home. The Patriot is the only daily newspaper published at Harrisburg which reaches its mail and rural free delivery subscribers on the same day it is issued. Jan 10-31.

Skyscraper Which was Not Fireproof

Cincinnati's recent $800,000 fire which destroyed half a dozen buildings in the very heart of the business district and threatened to wipe out an entire square, proved that the Union Trust Company skyscraper, said to be fireproof, was far from being so. A picture in the February Popular Mechanics Magazine shows the ruins of the structure.

Claysburg Bank Elections

The annual meeting of the shareholders of The First National Bank of Claysburg was held January 14, and the following Directors were elected for the coming year: P. N. Risser, Bedford; Charles W. Shaffer and John H. Zinn, Osterburg; B. F. Dively and J. E. Knipple, Queen; Dr. C. O. Johnston, Calvin Walter, Hugh Walter, Z. T. Lingenfelter and Thomas Walter, of Claysburg.

The Directors elected the following officers on Monday, January 20: President, Charles O. Johnston; Vice President, Hugh Walter; Second Vice President, John H. Zinn; Cashier, P. N. Risser.

This bank opened for business July 24, 1912, and with the opening of the new year had resources of $105,000. Its capital is $25,000 and surplus and profits over $4,000. The growth of this bank has been rapid, which speaks well for Cashier Risser, who is a resident of Bedford.

Officers Elected

At the annual meeting of the shareholders of the Bedford Electric Light Heat and Power Company on Tuesday the following directors were elected for the ensuing year: Frank Fletcher, Esq., Jo. W. Tate, Ed. D. Heckerman, A. B. Egolf, L. D. Blackwelder, Patrick Hughes and S. A. Van Ormer.

After the annual meeting the Board of Directors organized by electing the old officers as follows: President, Frank Fletcher; Vice President, Jo. W. Tate; Treasurer, A. B. Egolf; Secretary, S. A. Van Ormer.

The reports show the business of the company to be growing and important.

Revival Services Progressing

Seldom, if ever before, have the people of this community had the privilege of enjoying and taking part in evangelistic services such as are being conducted in the Methodist Episcopal Church of this place. For three weeks they have been in progress, and it might be possible to continue them yet another week, but it is expected the meetings will close Sunday night.

The attendance has been large, the singing the very best, and the Gospel preached in such a plain, simple manner, that many accept and have come out on the side with God. All in all it has been a wonderful blessing to the community.

As stated last week, those who have not taken advantage of the opportunity to hear Rev. Parsons, and to listen to the singing under the direction of Prof. Clark, should do so tonight or on Sunday. These men are here for no other purpose than to bring the Gospel to the community, and all are most cordially invited to the meetings.

Wednesday night was of unusual interest to those who were in attendance. A number of seekers, both young and old, were forward, and the sermon by Rev. Parsons was one of vast importance. He vividly portrayed the difference between a Christian and a church member.

Sermons tonight at 7:30. Sunday at 11 a. m. and 7:30 p. m.; Sunday School at 9:45 a. m., and Senior League at 6:30 p. m.

CHURCH REOPENING

Special Services Will Be Held at Woodbury Lutheran Church.

Trinity Lutheran Church, Woodbury, is to be reopened on Sunday, January 26, with fitting services. This is the date of the thirtieth anniversary of the dedication of the present edifice and it was thought best to commemorate it by a re-beautified church, hence the building has not only been painted white and a new iron roof put on it, but it has been made cozy within by a splendid hot air furnace, new lights, beautiful paper on the wall and fine Brussels carpet over the entire floor. This, with other needed furnishings, as collection plates, an individual communion service, a new pulpit Bible and leather upholstery, makes the church very inviting as well as attractive. It has all been accomplished by willing workers at an expense of upwards of $500, most of which has been provided in advance.

The anniversary service will open at 10:30 a. m., with a union Communion service at which Rev. E. Dutt, pastor when the edifice was dedicated, will preach. In the afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, there will be a fraternal meeting at which neighboring pastors will bring words of greeting, while in the evening at 7 o'clock a week of special services will begin and be in charge of the pastor, Rev. Charles R. Streamer. Rev. E. R. McCauley, D. D., of Altoona is to preach Monday and Tuesday evenings, while others will likely assist in the meetings of the week. All are invited to attend.

K. of P. Officers Installed
Monday night Past Grand Deputy Chancellor D. W. Prosser installed the officers of Bedford Lodge, No. 436, K. of P., as follows:
Chancellor—Commander, J. T. Budd; Vice Chancellor, Russell C. Boore; Master of Work, A. D. Bowlers; Prelate, William S. Lysinger; Master at Arms, H. T. Mortimore; Inner Guard, C. F. Watters; Outer Guard, H. P. Shires. The other officers of the Lodge, elected annually, are Master of Finance, J. S. Blymyer; Master of Exchequer, D. W. Prosser; Keeper of Records and Seal, M. W. Corle; Trustees, Jo. W. Tate, F. H. Brightbill and William S. Lysinger.

After the conclusion of the installation ceremonies, some interesting remarks were made by several of the members and a number of piano selections were given by Mr. Boore. The Lodge then adjourned to Allen's restaurant, where a feast, consisting of oysters, sandwiches, ice cream, cake and coffee, was served.

The Lodge has a membership of 107 members and a valuation of over $9,000. The meetings are well attended and much interest is being manifested.

Around the World Tourists Here

M. A. Hall, a young man 22 years old, and his mother, who live in New York and are on a trip around the world in an automobile, stopped in Bedford last week at the Hotel Waverly, keeping their car at the Hoffman garage.

They left San Francisco on November 15th on the trip across the continent to New York, which is the last lap of the most remarkable pleasure tour on record.

When they reach New York they will have been completely around the world, having gone over all the main roads in 33 different countries, traveling about 40,000 miles by land and 20,000 by water. They have been nearly two years making the trip.

It is a non-advertising, pleasure trip-only. There was not any repair expense put on the car on the whole trip. Mr. Hall remarked about the beautiful scenery from Pittsburgh here stating that it was the best they had seen east of the Rocky Mountains and that there were very few trips in the foreign countries to equal it. He was also very much pleased with the fine road from Pittsburgh here.

A Bit of English Humor.

An English humorist many years ago hit upon a neat way of scoring against certain politicians of the times. A comic journal, not being a newspaper within the meaning of the act, was prohibited from giving news, and so in place of a parliamentary report the humorist in question reported a few "first lines" from speeches by prominent members: "Sir Charles Wetherell said he was not sensible." "Mr. Hunt was entirely ignorant." "Lord Ashley said he should take the earliest opportunity of moving." "Mr. Perceval presented a petition praying." "Colonel Sibthorpe never could understand." "Lord Lyndhurst said he must treat of every one to give him credit." "Sir Edward Sugden was not one of those who thought." "Mr. Croker said he had the fullest assurance."

Wonderful Fiddles.

One of the greatest fiddles that ever were known was to be seen at the French court at the time of Charles IX. This was a viol so large that several boys could be placed inside of it. These boys used to sit inside this queer instrument and sing the airs that the man who handled the bow was playing on the viol outside. The effect is said to have been very beautiful, though it would seem as if the presence of the lads in its interior would seriously interfere with the tone of the "great fiddle," as it was called. Many years after another huge instrument of this kind was used at concerts in Boston. It was so large that to play it the fiddler had to stand on a table to use his bow at the proper point on the strings. This instrument was called "the grandfather of fiddles."

Columbia River Thrice Named.

The Columbia river has had three names. It was first called the Oregon. Afterward it was called the St. Roque, but when it was discovered by Robert Gray in 1792 it was given the name of his vessel, the Columbia, in place of the two floating appellations, Oregon and St. Roque. According to Whitney, the original name of the river was the Jrejon, "big ear" or "one that has big ears," the allusion being to the custom of the Indians who were found in its region of stretching their ears by boring them and crowding them with ornaments.

Both Hate Him.

"Funny thing," remarked Wilson musingly. "Tom Wilkins and Edith Brown used to be great friends of mine. I introduced them to each other. They got married, and now neither of them will speak to me. Wonder what the reason can be?"

What Every Debutante Should Know

That Paris is a better guide in clothes than in morals.

That because her great-grandmother smoked a pipe is no reason why she should smoke cigarettes.

That in affairs of the heart a young girl should be seen but not heard from.

That a young man's "Yes" doesn't always mean that he can afford the expense.

That many a father seems mean when he is merely hard up.

That the chauffeur is not a hero in the eyes of the footman.

That the matrimonial race is not always to the fast.

That a little brother is a dangerous thing.

That the plainest wall-flower may some day marry an Opera-box.

That nothing succeeds like appreciation of other people's success.

That a great deal of time and bother is saved in the long run by thinking it over before she marries.

That the surest way for a girl to make friends is by not trying to be something else.—Ralph Berggren in February Lippincott's.

No Answer

It was scarcely half-past nine when the rather fierce-looking father of the girl entered the parlor where the timid lover was waiting for her. The father had his watch in his hand.

"Young man," he said brusquely, "do you know what time it is?" "Y-y-es, sir," stuttered the frightened lover, as he scrambled out into the hall: "I—I was just going to leave!"

After the beau had made a rapid exit, the father turned to the girl and said in astonishment:

"What was the matter with that fellow? My watch has run down and I simply wanted to know the time."—February Lippincott's.

THE WOMAN'S BRIGADE

A Story of A. D. 1946
By SUSAN YOUNG PORTER

During the first and second decades of the twentieth century the women of England and America determined to wrest the vote for themselves from selfish men. The principal argument used against them was: "If you are citizens in one respect you must be citizens in all respects. If you are voters you must be soldiers."

The women triumphed. But their securing the vote brought about that which in the beginning they had not intended. Having proved their courage and endurance, they were forced to do military service. The more delicate women could not be induced to go to the polls. This gave the men a majority, and an act was passed by congress requiring military service from women as well as men.

To the surprise of every one, they sprang forward with alacrity. That aggressive spirit which had led many of them to smash windows led them to enlist, and the woman's brigade of the United States army was organized and placed under the command of women officers. The corps had hardly been completed when the anarchic condition of Mexico rendered intervention necessary, and the Mexican war of 1846 was repeated. The woman's brigade was sent with other troops by sea to Vera Cruz and began a rapid march toward the capital.

Almost on the exact ground on which was fought a century before the battle of Buena Vista another fight occurred between the Mexicans and Americans, in which the women took a conspicuous part. But, unfortunately for General Pollywottle, the American commander, it was his first fight with such an auxiliary, and he was utterly ignorant of certain provisions he should have made to guard against contingencies to which they were liable.

In this respect the Mexican commander, Antonio Rodriguez Bustamante, proved greatly the American's superior. The Mexicans were drawn up in line of battle to resist the advance of the Americans, who hurled themselves against their enemy with great vigor. The woman's brigade, being a part of the reserve, stood under arms, impatiently waiting to be led forward. Colonel Amanda Patterson of the First regiment sat her horse superbly, resplendent in a uniform cut and decorated in a fashion that excited the admiration and envy of the whole corps. Major Mildred Fortescue rode over to Colonel Patterson to ask her who was her tailor. Colonel Patterson refused to give the information. This led to hot words between the two, in which many of their subordinates joined, and before long their shrill words could be heard above the singing bullets and shrieking shells.

"For heaven's sake," roared the American commander to an aid, "send those women into the fight! Our men can't hear the orders for the din they make, and there'll be a panic. Order their general to lead them against the enemy's left flank and turn it if possible. Should they succeed the battle is won."

General Angelina De Lancy, a young commander of whom much was expected, as soon as she received the order, drawing her sword, swung it over her head. Unfortunately she severed two ostrich feathers worth a hundred dollars each, and so unnerved was she that valuable time was lost. When she recovered from the loss of her treasures she directed her bugler to sound the advance.

Now, General Bustamante, as I have said, had great experience with men, having been married seven times, which is once more than King Henry VIII., and had prepared an expedition for them which, on seeing them move forward, he put into operation.

"What is that the enemy are doing from those mortars?" asked the American commander, raising his glass.

"They look like paper shells," remarked his chief of staff.

Great wads of paper rose in the air and, breaking apart, were scattered on the ground over which the woman's brigade was passing. Here and there a soldier in the ranks picked up one and became absorbed in reading something printed and looking at pictures on it.

"Great heavens!" cried General Pollywottle, "they are stopping to pick up the papers. The advance is delayed. Precious time is being lost."

Presently an officer from the woman's brigade was seen riding full gallop toward the commander in chief. When she came up she saluted and said:

"General De Lancy directs me to report that the enemy have fired a volley of fashion plates with descriptive articles among the troops. This has checked the advance and she is unable to induce them to advance farther. They are poring over the papers and are insensible even to danger. General De Lancy respectfully suggests that you send another force to turn the enemy's flank."

Words that sounded like a volley from a galling gun left the general's lips. There were no other troops to send in place of the woman's brigade and General Bustamante, seeing his advantage, sounded a general advance. The battle was lost. Within ten minutes the American army was in full retreat. The Mexicans passed the woman's brigade still intent on the fashion plates and cut them off.

The corps became disorganized, many of the soldiers marrying Mexicans

CONQUEST OF THE AIR.

First Public Flight of an Aeroplane in This Country.

In "The Curtiss Aviation Book" Glenn Curtiss describes the first public aeroplane flight in America, in the days before any one had ever heard of the young Yankee inventor, and he was experimenting with Alexander Graham Bell and others:

"Baldwin climbed into the seat, took the control in hand, and we cranked the motor. When we released our hold of the machine it sped over the ice like a scared rabbit for two or three hundred feet and then, much to our joy, it jumped into the air. This was what we had worked for through many 'ong months, and naturally we watched the brief and uncertain course of Baldwin with a good deal of emotion.

"Rising to a height of six or seven feet, Baldwin flew the unheeded distance of 318 feet 11 inches! Then, he came down ingloriously, on one wing. As we learned afterward, the frail framework of the tail had bent and the machine had flopped over on its side and dropped on the wing, which gave way and caused the machine to turn completely around.

"It had taken just seven weeks to build the machine and get it ready for the trial; it had taken just about twenty seconds to smash it. But a great thing had been accomplished. We had achieved the first public flight of a heavier than air machine in America!"

THE FIRST WATCHES.

They Had Weights, Not Springs, and Were as Big as Plates.

At first the watch was about the size of a dessert plate. It had weights and was used as a "pocket clock." The earliest known use of the modern name occurs in the record of 1552, which mentions that Edward VI. had "one larum or watch of iron, the case being likewise of iron gilt, with two plummetts of lead."

The first watches may readily be supposed to have been of rude execution. The first great improvement, the substitution of springs for weights, was in 1550. The earliest springs were of steel, but only straight pieces of steel. Early watches had only one hand and, being wound up twice a day, they could not be expected to keep time nearer than fifteen or twenty minutes in the twelve hours. The dials were of silver or brass. The cases had no crystals, but opened at the back and front and were four or five inches in diameter.

A plain watch cost the equivalent of $1,600 in our currency, and after one was ordered it took a year to make it—Exchange.

Exasperating.

A stuttering salesman called on a New York buyer with an excellent proposition. In well turned sentences he proceeded to lay before the buyer his superb argument. But, alas, in every well turned sentence there were "bs" and "rns," and over these the salesman stuttered pitifully.

The buyer before whom he was pleading was a caustic, nasty sort of chap, and after five minutes of stuttering at a point where the salesman was floundering most dreadfully, the buyer held up his hand and said:

"I'm afraid I can't understand you. Call again when you're sober."

The salesman turned scarlet with mortification and rage.

"R-b-b-but"—

"No," said the buyer, waving him resolutely toward the door, "not now—when you're sober."

And the infuriated salesman departed.—Washington Star.

Macaulay as a Talker.

Where Macaulay's talk failed is clearly shown by Greville. "If he could tread less heavily on the ground, if he could touch the subjects he handles with a lighter hand, if he knew when to stop as well as he knows what to say, his talk would be as attractive as it is wonderful." It is all summed up in the sentence, "He gave society more than it required and not exactly of the kind."

Macaulay, in fact, suffered from excess of the first requisite of talk, according to Johnson—"materials." As Sir Henry Taylor said, "His memory had swamped his mind."

Flashes of ignorance as well as of silence are necessary to the perfect talker. And so, as has been said, Macaulay often exhausted his audiences before he exhausted the subject.—London Chronicle.

A Juvenile Critic.

A small girl of five was walking recently with her mother through the public garden in Boston. The Washington monument attracted her attention, and she inquired what it was.

"That," replied her mother, "is a statue of George Washington."

The little lady regarded it critically for some moments, and then she said, "Washington didn't take a very good statue, did he, mother?"—Everybody's.

After any Sickness

nothing so rapidly restores health and vigor as SCOTT'S EMULSION. It is the essence of natural body-nourishment, so medically perfect that nature immediately appropriates and distributes it to every organ, every tissue—feeding, nourishing and restoring them to normal activity.

SCOTT'S EMULSION is not a patent medicine, but is nature's body-nourishment with curative, upbuilding properties and without a drop of drug or alcohol. It contains superior cod liver oil, the hypophosphites of lime and soda with glycerine, and is so delicately emulsified that it enters the system without digestive effort—builds, tones and sustains.

After croup, whooping cough, measles and other child ailments it is nature's ally in restoring health.

After grippe or pneumonia it imparts strength and health, and for colds, coughs, sore, tight chests and throat troubles SCOTT'S EMULSION gives the greatest relief known.

How to Make a Youngster's Rubbers Wear

In the February Woman's Home Companion appears the following suggestion. It is published in the department devoted to practical household news:

"My boys wear out their rubbers so fast that I finally learned how to make one pair last a full season. I get our cobbler to put one thickness of leather on the inside of the heel and another on the outside, and then fasten on the regular heelplate. He does this for ten cents, and it is amazing, as well as gratifying, to see how long the rubbers last."

Important Question

More vegetarian humor. One of the fleshless fraternity telephones us that he engaged a German cook lady not long ago. His wife liked the appearance of the applicant; her references were good, and the wages she demanded not exorbitant.

"I'd like to have you come," said the lady of the house, "but perhaps you won't want to live with us. We are vegetarians and never have any meat in the house. Would you be satisfied with a vegetable diet?"

The fraulein scratched her head.

"Vell," she said dubiously, "iss beer a vegetable?"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The Greek Symposium.

The Greek symposium was literally "drinking together," but before the drinking fully began there was a banquet, more or less elaborate, as the wealth and taste of the host might dictate. The guests came in their best. Even old Socrates, Plato tells us in his "Dialogue" on the subject, was not above taking a little extra pains when he was invited out. Some one met him one day in the market place, "fresh from the bath and sandaled," and as the sight of the sandals was unusual he asked him whither he was going that he was so fine. "To a banquet at Agathon's," he replied, "and I have put on my finery because he is a fine creature. What say you to going with me unbidden?"

A Joke on His Clerical Brother.

Two brothers named Chalmers, one a minister and the other a physician, lived together in a western town. One day a man called at the house and asked for Mr. Chalmers. The physician, who answered the door, replied:

"I am he."

"You're changed considerably since I last heard you preach," said the man, who appeared greatly astonished.

"Oh, it's my brother you want to see he preaches and I practice"—Kansas City Star.

A Breach of Promise Case

By F. A. MITCHEL

"My daughter," said Judge Leudbetter to Mr. Ralph Fanning, "since sending you to me to ask for her hand has changed her mind. Not as to her feelings toward you, but she has decided to pursue the profession she has been studying under my tutelage. We are a race of lawyers, and my daughter inherits the family inclination. After giving an affirmative answer to your suit she fell to considering that marriage would necessarily prevent her following a legal career."

"It seems to me, Judge, that this is a case of breach of promise. I, too, have inherited legal instincts from a long line of jurists. My great grandfather was an associate United States justice, my grandfather was an eminent criminal lawyer."

"Enough. You enter a charge against my daughter of breach of promise. You shall have an opportunity to substantiate it and she to plead."

The judge called a maid and told her to ask Miss Margaret to step into his study. The lady came in, somewhat surprised to see Mr. Fanning there and curious to know why she had been summoned.

"My dear," said her father, "Mr. Fanning charges you with breach of promise. I do not understand that it is for the purpose of claiming damages, but I cannot allow you to treat any one unfairly. What have you to say to the charge of accepting him and then throwing him over?"

"I plead not guilty."

"Very well. Now, Fanning, you may proceed to state your case."

"My attentions to Miss Margaret have been noticeable and noticed by our mutual friends for months. She has accepted various trifles from me, especially gifts of flowers, indicating that my attentions were agreeable to her. Last evening I called upon her. We were sitting in a cozy room in this house before a fire of blazing logs. An aroma of the last lot of cut flowers I sent her, arranged in a Dresden vase by her own shapely hands, pervaded the apartment. The cheery firelight contrasted delightfully with the winter gloom without. We sat side by side on a large—"

"I object!" cried the lady.

"The objection is not sustained," ruled the judge.

"Nevertheless I prefer to respect the defendant's wishes," said the plaintiff. "I will omit the rest of what happened except so far as it pertains to the law of contracts. I then and there asked your daughter to be my wife. Her head sank—"

"I object again!" cried the lady. "The plaintiff states in one breath that he will omit what happened except as to a contract he claims to have been made and in the next breaks his promise."

"I beg the defendant's pardon," continued Mr. Fanning. "What occurred was the delight of my life. I was in a whirl of joy!"

"Yes, yes," interrupted the judge. "The court understands all that. He has been there himself, though many years ago. Please confine yourself to the contract."

"Your daughter, her beautiful face buried against my breast, whispered 'Yes.'"

There were a few moments of silence, when the judge announced to his daughter that he was ready to hear her defense.

"Your honor," she began—"I mean papa—I base my defense upon that law which has protected many a minor in an inheritance, the law against exerting undue influence upon a testator. Mr. Fanning sought to deprive the no profession of the law of my life's services. He took advantage of our pleasant surroundings, the cheerful firelight, the aroma of flowers, the luxurious sofa—"

"Chair!" interrupted the plaintiff.

"Will you protect me?" cried the girl, appealing to her father.

"Another such interruption," said the judge sternly to Fanning, "and I will fine you for contempt."

"I claim," the defendant proceeded, "that Mr. Fanning took advantage of these surroundings to unduly influence me to bequeath myself to him instead of my natural heir, the law."

"And I claim," urged the plaintiff "that in giving herself to the law the defendant disinherits her natural heirs a husband and children, besides wrecking the life of myself, the plaintiff in this case."

A silence followed these words, which were spoken with great depth of feeling. It was broken by the judge, who asked of Fanning:

"Do you desire to enter any rebuttal of my daughter's statement?"

"No, your honor. I rest my case which I have summed up in my last words—that if the contract is broken it will result in the wrecking of my life."

"I reserve my decision," said the judge. "The court will take a recess for half an hour, at the end of which time the decision will be handed down."

He retired from the room, leaving the plaintiff and defendant together. In exactly half an hour he returned and seating himself, appeared to be framing what he was about to say when his daughter spoke:

"You needn't trouble yourself, papa. The case has been settled out of court."

"Indeed!" The judge looked pleased. "On what terms?"

"We're to be married in the spring and go to Europe on our wedding trip."

SUNDAY SCHOOL.

Lesson IV.—First Quarter, For Jan. 26, 1913.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, Gen. iv, 1-15—Memory Verses, 9, 10—Golden Text, 1 John iii, 15—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

Having seen in our last lesson the entrance of sin into this world and the love of God to sinners manifested in His seeking and finding and saving His erring ones and revealing to them His plan of redemption by the shedding of blood of an innocent substitute, typifying the sacrifice to be offered in due time on Golgotha, even the sacrifice of Himself, "the Lamb slain from the foundation of the world" (Rev. xiii, 8), we now see in Cain and Abel samples of all disobedient and obedient people—the ungodly, who listen to and follow the devil, and the godly, who believe and obey God. Our Lord Himself spoke of Abel as a righteous man, whereas Cain is said to be "of that wicked one," and a woe is pronounced upon such as go in the way of Cain (Matt. xxiii, 35; 1 John iii, 12; Jude 11). All religions and religious people are either of Cain or Abel. The devil is very religious and will tolerate and even encourage every kind of religion that does not stand upon the great atonement, the precious blood of the substitute, the Lamb of God.

It is impossible to know God or to approach Him or to worship Him except through Jesus Christ, even as He said, "No man cometh unto the Father but by me," and again, "Neither knoweth any man the Father save the Son and he to whomsoever the Son will reveal Him" (John xiv, 6; Matt. xi, 27). All religions are either a worship of demons or of God, according to Deut. xxxii, 17; 1 Cor. x, 20, and it is certainly startling to think of the multitudes who think that they are worshipping God, while in truth it is the way of Cain, because Jesus is not accepted as God, and God's way of salvation is ignored. The only way of approach to God is plainly taught in Gen. iii, 21, as stated in last week's lesson. Both Cain and Abel and all the other children and grandchildren of Adam and Eve knew the way for Adam would not fail to teach them, but some, like Abel, accepted God's way, while others, like Cain, listened to the adversary and rejected the sacrifice and were therefore rejected by God. Cain and Abel are used as illustrations of all the rest. The Pharisee and publican of Luke xviii, 10-14, show the same contrast. All who think that they are good enough and moral and honest and good citizens and not sinners, like some others, and thus go about to establish their own righteousness and will not submit to the righteousness of God (Rom. x, 3) are on the line of Cain.

Those who confess their sins and plead for mercy because of redemption are sure to get it. The presence of the Lord was manifest in the flaming sword at the east of the garden of Eden. There, or as near as possible to it, these brothers came, like others, to worship God. Abel came in God's appointed way with the sacrifice for sin, for "it is the blood that maketh an atonement" and "without shedding of blood is no remission" (Lev. xvii, 11; Heb. ix, 22). Cain brought a more beautiful offering than Abel, but there was no sacrifice for sin, no shedding of blood, no submission or obedience to God. The one was accepted, the other rejected, but how could they tell? As we search the Scriptures to see how God accepted sacrifice we learn from Lev. ix, 24; Judg. vi, 21; 1 Kings xviii, 38; II Chron. vii, 1, that His method was to send fire from heaven to consume the offering.

As we see these two men and their offerings in the presence of the flaming sword we must conclude that the fire touched Abel's offering and consumed it, while Cain's offering remained untouched. The sword of divine justice demanding a sacrifice for sin is no doubt referred to in Zech. xiii, 7, illustrated in Abraham with the fire and the knife, and in the four passages just referred to, and fulfilled on Golgotha.

In the Lord's word to Cain in verse 7 the words "Sin lieth at the door" are by Young translated "A sin offering is crouching." He could easily have obtained a lamb for an offering, but that would have been an acknowledgment that his younger brother was right, and his pride and his rebellious heart would not suffer him so to do. See him by his lie to God in verse 9 still further confessing himself a child of the devil, the father of lies (John viii, 44). By his further word "Am I my brother's keeper?" he represents all who care not for the welfare of others, but selfishly seek only their own.

In Ex. xii, 4, our neighbor is the one with whom we can share the lamb; in the good Samaritan story it is the one in distress of any kind whom we may help. Note in verse 10 how the voice of his brother's blood cried unto the Lord, and what shall be said of the blood shed on Golgotha, which is ever crying in salvation for those who hear, but in vengeance for those who refuse? (II Thess. i, 7, 8.) May the two questions of Gen. iii, 9; iv, 9, hold us in the power of the Holy Spirit, "Where art thou?" "Where is thy brother?"

The only way in which Cain could go out from the presence of the Lord (verse 16) was by going away from the place of His manifested presence in the garden of Eden.

Your Lungs and Throat.
The preparation mentioned by the Rev. Chas. Sager has been for over sixty years of incalculable worth to sufferers from consumption, asthma, bronchitis, catarrh, grippe, coughs, colds and all lung and throat diseases, and is a household remedy in many, many homes to which it has brought health and happiness.

Ms. C. A. ABBOTT, August 22, 1905.
60 Ann St., New York City.
Dear Sir: I have known for over 40 years of the effects of Wilson's Remedy. I was a sufferer from Hypertrophies and Emphysema in cases of pulmonary troubles. At this point I will say to you what you have not before known of, that 40 years ago, while I was a resident of N. Y. City, I was severely ill with lung trouble. Physicians said I was a consumptive and my family physician told me that he thought I could not recover. My attention was directed to the Wilson Remedy, which I used with splendid effect. I have been on my feet and at work ever since my cure. Yours truly,
Pastor M. E. Church, Hunter, (Greene Co.), N. Y.

The above letter shows what a great boon the Wilson Remedy was to Mr. Sager, but it is but one of thousands received testifying to the curative powers of this wonderful remedy. Write at once to Mr. Abbott at the above address and he will furnish you convincing proof of the great worth to humanity of this preparation.

OAT SPROUTS FINE WINTER GREENS.

In winter, when all's so cold and white and there's nothing green in sight, a block of sprouted oats looks good enough for humans to eat. Biddy certainly gobbles it greedily. It has become a standard green food for winter, not so much for its food value, but for its stimulative effect on the digestive organs, for variety, for a substitute for summer greens, to make the crop spongy, to mix with the rich concentrated grain ration so that the hen may not get overfat and indigestion.

The fancier who does not feed succulent greens as well as good grains need not expect many eggs in winter, for it's the good green stuff that helps to bring the big bunch of eggs in spring and summer, and it is just as essential for winter laying.

Sprouting oats is easy. Sprouting cabinets with heating apparatus are now on the market. A rack like the picture or any old box with narrow rim will do.

Simply soak clean, sound oats in warm water for a day and then spread in trays about two inches deep and keep in temperature of 60 to 70 degrees or warmer.

Many sprout the oats beside the cellar furnace.

The oats must be kept thoroughly wet and for the first two days should be stirred so that every grain gets moisture.

It is fed when four to five inches long, new oats being set to sprout right along, to take the place of that fed, a square foot of the sod being broken up for twelve hens per day.

In this process oats sometimes mold and are then unfit for food.

To prevent, the oats should be sterilized before soaking.

To sterilize, say, fifteen bushels of oats mix a half pint of formalin with fifteen gallons of water.

Spread the oats, thoroughly wet with solution, and cover for half day, so that grain is thoroughly disinfected; then dry the oats, bag and sprout as needed.

When sprouts are too long they are tough and indigestible.

As hens are greedy for this food it must not be fed strong at first, especially where greens have not been fed regularly, as they are apt to overfeed and get hard crop.

DON'TS.

Don't use all the adjectives in the English vocabulary to sell a fifty cent hen. A buyer knows a liar.

Don't take soiled eggs to market. People judge you by the goods you sell.

Don't scald the head and legs of poultry. They discolor and spoil the appearance of a pretty carcass.

ALL BLANKETY BLANK.

It is December. The new year is quickly drawing nigh. And Mr. Blank sits by his desk just making his pen fly.

Why does he write so furiously? Does he fear dissolution? Why, no—ahem!—he's getting up His New Year's resolution.

There, Mrs. Blank is writing too! She just has written down, "I promise not to scold you, dear, Nor all the twelve months frown."

Yes, it is lovely, and we hope Both to their vows keep true; That they may be sweet, lovely doves And ever bill and coo.

It's evening, January first. The pledges are both busted. She started in to henpeck him. Now both are mad, disgusted.

Oh, no; don't say, "What silly fools!" My, no, don't say, "It's blank!" Remember from the first to last The whole blame thing was Blank. C. M. BARNITZ.

MR. FARMER, GET WISE, ADVERTISE.

Seventy-five per cent of the advertisers in the London (O.) Democrat are farmers.

They are wise to the quickest, slickest, easiest way to get on ton trade, to keep goods moving out and the cash coming in.

No, Mr. Farmer, advertising wasn't invented for the exclusive use of the town merchant to boom business any more than you were born to stand in a cyrbstone market and freeze off your nose and toes waiting for customers to meander along to buy your butter and eggs at any old price.

The prosperous merchant smiles when some fellow with cobwebs on his cerebellum asks, "Does advertising pay?" With him it's the sine qua non.

Men who fail in business are often blamed for lack of business capacity when it is simply lack of advertising sagacity.

The farmer who advertises in a good medium and backs his ad. with a square deal has a cinch.

People do not buy calico, shoes, stoves and paint every day, but every day they must have eats.

The farmer feeds the nation.

The people depend on him for bread, and there are always empty stomachs and empty pantry shelves for him to fill.

With such continuous demand for his product why should the farmer travel in that same old rut to market or trade his products at the cross-roads store or get gold bricked by the city middleman when an advertisement will bring him into quick communication with his customer, build up a bon ton private trade, give him higher prices and save him so much time, wear and tear?

The modern newspaper is a business miracle worker, and it not only works wonders for the town merchant, but for the farmer as well.

FEATHERS AND EGGSHELLS.

A two-year-old White Rock hen in the Missouri egg contest laid eighty-two eggs in eighty-two consecutive days and up to date of report with her 170 eggs was ahead of the whole bunch which contained many pullets. It has been demonstrated that hens vary in the time of their top notch performance, some doing the trick in their pullet year and others waiting to that period when Dr. Osler would give it to everybody in the neck.

One thing the egg laying contests demonstrate—viz, that members of the same breed differ in laying capacity. At one place a breed leads, and at another competition the same breed is the tailfeeder. Thus it does not depend on the breed name, but the strain of that breed, for a good record.

Professor Lippincott of the Kansas experiment station has been conducting egg candling schools throughout the state for the instruction of all persons dealing in eggs. By the old plan the wholesaler only candled eggs and the customer eventually paid for the rots. All the states should give this instruction.

Some hotels refuse to buy ducks unless guaranteed not to have been fed on fish. How different from the day when the piddle duck was in vogue! It lived on mullets, tadpoles, frogs and water skippers and was considered an epicurean perfect.

There is a marked difference in the appearance and flavor of eggs preserved with lime and water glass. The water glass eggs are almost like new, and then it is so much easier and more pleasant for the operator than the old, disagreeable, dainty lime method.

The old hens and pullets should be penned separately. The pullets should be fed liberally, as they have not attained full growth, but a lavish ration for old hens means overfat, few eggs and disease.

Five thousand dollars was voted at the American Poultry association meeting at Nashville for the publication of a "Utility Standard." If this book is prepared by practical poultrymen and sold at a reasonable price it will have an immense sale.

The Jewish holiday duck makes a big cut into the duck population, but some farmers will hold on to ducks with the false idea that there is more in them at Thanksgiving. They must expend two months' more labor and feed, often must sell for less, and do not get the duck yards into renew them for the next season.

Henry Richardson, a negro of Roanoke, confessed to stealing 1,000 chickens in three months and making $100 per month through their sale. Fifty chickens was often a night haul.

The February American Magazine

The February American Magazine contains a wonderful letter by Allan Pinkerton, never before published, in which the famous detective relates his connection with the first plot to assassinate Lincoln. Lincoln was on his way to Washington in February, 1861, and the plan was to kill him in Baltimore while he was passing through that city on the way to Washington where he was to be inaugurated. Pinkerton discovered the plot, saved Lincoln's life, and tells the whole story in this letter which was written in 1866 but never reached the public until The American Magazine got hold of it.

Brand Whitlock, Mayor of Toledo, O., writes the second chapter of his personal reminiscences and tells some remarkable stories about James G. Blaine, Governor Altgeld, and the Whitechapel Club of Chicago, which in its time was probably the most famous and most interesting Bohemian club in the world.

Dr. Woods Hutchinson begins a new department entitled "Health and Horse-Power." David Grayson contributes a new "Adventure in Conitment." A New York policeman writes the "Diary Of a Cop." Albert J. Nock tells about Coatesville, Pa.—a town where citizens burned a man alive and then did nothing about it. Augustus Post writes the "Experiences of an Airman."

An excellent assortment of fiction, together with four departments filled with good reading, completes an unusual number.

Children Cry FOR FLETCHER'S CASTORIA

Dislikes Title "Professor"

Here is a story of Woodrow Wilson that should have come to light earlier. It is well known that Mr. Wilson always objected to being called "professor." Once while visiting in Washington while still head of Princeton, he met one of his trustees on the street.

"Good morning, professor," called out the trustee heartily.

"If you must call me professor," replied Mr. Wilson, "speak low, for every one around here will think that I am a boothblack."

Kindly Counsel

"Sir," said Baron Fucash, "I desire to ask your consent to my marriage with your daughter."

"Well," replied Mr. Cumrox, "take my advice and don't let anybody know that you have done so. If she and her mother find it out you will be regarded in this household as having set a very dangerous precedent."

Ford Vanadium Steel

And the highest priced steel—Vanadium—used anywhere in the automobile construction goes into its making.

Hundreds of thousands of dollars were spent in perfecting of Ford Vanadium steel—the lightest, toughest, strongest steel known.

A bar of this steel one-half inch thick and weighing eight pounds is stronger than a bar of ordinary steel one inch thick and weighing sixteen pounds.

It is economy for the Ford Motor Company to use this high-priced, fine grained steel in all Ford construction as it doubles the life of the car—lessens by half the number of repairs—and multiplies by two its general serviceability.

The Ford's wonderful lightness and surprising strength are due to Vanadium Steel.

Parcel Post

Since the event of Parcel Post, our Mail Order business has more than doubled. Now a good many customers have paid for this Merchandise by remitting the ordinary letter postage which we cannot use on packages nor exchange at Post Office.

Therefore we will respectfully ask the public to remit us Parcel Post Stamps, and not Letter Stamps as heretofore.

Try the New Parcel System and see how cheap and convenient it is.

SOLONS IN SESSION

To standardize weights and measures under State supervision.

Repealing the mercantile license fee law.

Constitutional convention bill presented.

Resolution for ratification of income tax amendment.

Resolution for amendment to Federal constitution, whereby United States Senators may be elected by direct vote.

Mr. Matt presented one of the three pension bills providing pensions for veterans of the Civil War and carrying with it an appropriation of $1,900,000.

Mr. Matt Makes Explanation

In the Democratic caucus the argument on the filing of the clerkships was brought up by Matt, just as the caucus was ready to adjourn. He prefaced his remarks with the declaration that the caucus had practically repudiated the work of their committeemen, and that he could not be bound by the caucus to repudiate the action and report of the committee, to which he had affixed his name. He declared that the Democrats on the committee had consulted at headquarters, and had been advised to take the action which they finally took, and that they had carried out to their best ability what they regarded as the policy of the Democrats whom they represented, whose chief purpose they believed to be to prevent the Old Guard from continuing to dominate the action of the House, in the face of the charges that had been made against the present chief clerk in the past.

Roll Twisted

Consternation seized the House of Representatives Wednesday afternoon, when it was discovered that William S. Leib of Schuylkill County, Penrose candidate for president clerk of the House, who was declared elected Monday night after a prolonged battle, actually was not elected, but had been counted in by the aid of three votes recorded for him which had been cast for other candidates.

Leib himself had left for home when the discovery was made; but his friends were thrown into a frenzy of fear and excitement, and they have been busy ever since, attempting to explain away the apparent facts, and to forestall a renewal of hostilities, which, nevertheless, appears inevitable at next Monday night's session.

Leib cannot spare the three votes, his announced vote being 104, the exact number required to elect. What the powers of the House are in this situation has not been definitely decided by the leaders of any faction. All that is certain is that an effort will be made by the independents at the next day's session to oust Leib from his position and to elect their own or the Democratic candidate in his place. They claim that Wednesday's events have caused gains to their ranks, and that Leib, if he is compelled to submit his cause to the House again, will surely lose.

Men's Meeting

The Church of God at Saxton had a very interesting service on the 19th. A large Sunday School was held in the morning, followed by preaching services. At 2:30 a men's meeting was held. This service was largely attended. Very fine music was furnished by a double male quartet. Hon. P. B. Cutchall delivered a fine address, giving many reasons why men should attend divine services. Mr. Cutchall is treasurer of Huntingdon County and has many friends about Saxton.

Prof. J. W. Barney of Defiance gave a well prepared address on the Sunday School and the need of taking an interest in the same. Prof. Barney is principal of the Broad Top Township High School and one of Bedford County's best educators. The pastor closed the services with a few remarks.

Revival services were held in the evening and the house was crowded and several were converted. The meeting will continue during the week. The pastor, Rev. F. W. McGuire, will preach at Coaldale, January 26, at 10:30 and at North Point at 2:30.

Social Gathering

The neighbors and friends gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Appleman, of near New Paris, recently in honor of their son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Appleman. The young folks were presented with a nice quilt. A fine dinner was served and the following persons spent a pleasant day: Mr. and Mrs. John Appleman, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Howsare, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Custer, Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Appleman, Mrs. Harvey Custer, Mrs. Carrie Miller, Mrs. David Custer, Mrs. Durbin Miller, Mrs. Sarah Miller, Mrs. Stella Shaffer, Mrs. Angie Shaffer, Lena, Margaret, John, Howard and Harry Custer; Marie, Gladys, Mervin and Bruce Miller; Geraldine and Edward Shaffer and Lloyd Zimmers.
